

American Cancer Society
250 Williams Street NW
Atlanta, Georgia, 30303
800-227-2345

February 13, 2014 03:00 PM Central Standard Time

American Cancer Society Partners with the Winship Cancer Institute to Host Documentary Film Screening of “Diagnosis: Terminal” and Provide Cancer Screenings for Attendees

ATLANTA— The American Cancer Society will host a film screening of the documentary Diagnosis: Terminal with film director David Ballard. Beginning in 2008, Ballard followed the struggles of three young adults who were diagnosed with cancer. His film aims to bring greater attention to cancer prevention and research and has been shown on college campuses across the nation. The screening will take place in room 208 of White Hall on the Emory University campus. Attendees who bring their ticket stub to the Winship Cancer Institute following the film screening can participate in a cancer screening free of charge at any point that week.

Who:	The American Cancer Society and the Winship Cancer Institute
What:	Documentary Film Screening of “Diagnosis: Terminal” and Cancer Screening Week
When:	Monday, February 24, through Friday, February 28, 2014 at 6:30 pm
Where:	White Hall, Room 208 301 Dowman Drive Atlanta, Georgia 30322	Winship Cancer Institute 1365C Clifton Road Atlanta, Georgia 30322

Additional Information on Event

- The event is part of the ACS’s “I Can, Cancer Can’t” campaign to educate young adults about cancer and to encourage them to participate in cancer screenings and be proactive about cancer prevention through healthy lifestyle changes.
- Film director David Ballard and representatives from the Winship Cancer Institute and the ACS will be available an hour prior to the film screening each day for interviews and photo opportunities.
- The Patient and Family Resource Center, located on the first floor of the Winship Cancer Institute, is a relaxing library area stocked with resources for reference, supplies for patients and information on volunteer and social services.

About the Winship Cancer Institute

Established in 1937, the Winship Cancer Institute of Emory University is dedicated to the integration of innovative clinical and basic science research with patient care for the prevention, treatment, and control of cancer. Committed to a team approach to researching and treating cancer, Winship brings together wide-ranging expertise with scientists, physicians, epidemiologists, nurses, biomedical engineers, and social workers drawn from across the University.

About The American Cancer Society

The American Cancer Society is the nationwide, community-based, voluntary health organization dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives, and diminishing suffering from cancer, through research, education, advocacy, and service.

Contacts

American Cancer Society
Monica Flores, 850-982-2098
mflores@cancer.org